ABSTRACT

Compiled are materials related to work study programs for the educable mentally handicapped adolescent. Items listed include professional books, textbooks, resource aids, journals and articles, curriculum guides, instructional materials, and audiovisual aids. The materials are grouped according to academic areas (mathematics, science, social studies, English, reading), vocational education (general, industrial arts, home economics, jobs, trades), and social skills (general, safety, driving, recreation, home care, health, social adjustment). Also included are sections on supplementary audiovisual materials, tests, and professional books. Some materials are briefly annotated; detailed descriptions of the others are available from the retrieval filing system at New England Materials Instruction Center. (KW)

Materials for Secondary School Programs for the Educable Mentally Retarded Adolescent

This is a compilation of materials that are appropriate for use in a work study program for the educable mentally retarded adolescent. Included are professional books, textbooks, resource aids, professional journals and articles, curriculum guides, instructional materials, and audio-visual aids in the following areas: academics, vocational education, and social development.

Materials which were available were reviewed and annotated. The materials that were not checked and reviewed are generally included at the end of each subgroup section. A detailed description for the unannotated materials is available in the retrieval filing system at NEMIC.

This special project was originally undertaken upon request by the state of Rhode Island. Dr. Harold Ruvin, Associate Professor at Boston University, initiated and supervised the study. The original committee consisted of the following graduate students in special education at Boston University: Lynn Rosenberg, Patricia Lie, Ted Braun, John B. McGilvray, and Leo Rafferty.

The revised edition was supervised by Dr. Harold Ruvin and was undertaken by Rena Joyce Minisi, a graduate student in special education at Boston University. This edition includes an updated listing of materials for each of the above mentioned areas, and a reorganization of the format.
